WHAT DISTINGUISHES KBJS CONSULTING

Kim Byers started in the file room of a law firm in 1996. Her role evolved into IT manager of the practice then she took on the role of office administrator. Having learned the ropes from the inside Kim worked with one of the leading IT firms in Toronto as a consultant to law firms in office practice automation. Over the past 17 years she has led hundreds of implementations of practice management software in the law firm environment. She holds certifications in many major law firm focused applications. As the practice of law has gone mobile Kim has followed it with an increasing emphasis on mobile computing and the workings of the virtual office.

Kim has been a guest lecturer on accounting and practice management software at the University of Toronto, participating in Canada's first course on legal technology offered by a law school.
