WHAT'S NEW

Advanced Search Forms

Advanced Search Forms will enable end users to construct a more focused and precise search. This feature will assist all users by making precision segment search capabilities more intuitive and easier to access.

Advanced Search Forms are accessible from the “Advanced Search” link at the top right corner of the red search box.

This link will take users to the generic Advanced Search Form where they can find a case or QuickCITE record directly, or select specific search forms that are tailored to the particular content type that they wish to search. As illustrated in the “Cases” advanced search form below, each content-specific advanced search form contains fields tailored to that particular content type.

Search forms are interactive. As a user enters information in the fields, their search query is constructed in the main search box at the top of the page.

With the help of the segment examples at the bottom right of the page, users can better understand what portion of the document each field in the advanced search form is targeting.
